CERAMIC

This is not the same material as your "grandma's" ceramic. This is high-tech ceramic. It is an inorganic, non-metallic solid that is available in black, white and pink. This hypoallergenic ceramic is valued for its scratch, heat and fade resistant properties. Ceramic jewelry has a greater hardness than Titanium. This doesn't mean that ceramic will never exhibit wear and tear at some point and if dropped this ceramic material may crack due to the velocity of force of the impact.

BLACK ZIRCONIUM

Black Zirconium is a metal element similar to titanium. It is durable, scratch-resistant, and the color will never fade or rub off. Zirconium is also hypoallergenic, lightweight and shatterproof. The surface of the metal feels like ceramic and it is very resistant to corrosion. It can be personalized by engraving.

COBALT

A newer material being used in the construction of alternative metal jewelry, it is lightweight and hypoallergenic. Its platinum-look differentiates it from both tungsten and titanium. Cobalt is very scratch-resistant and is more scratch-resistant than titanium, but not quite as hard as tungsten. Cobalt rings will not chip or crack. It can be engraved with personalized sentiments.

TANTALUM

A rare earth metal Tantalum is a very dense, malleable metal making working with it similar to working with gold. It has a unique bluish gray color that gives it a distinctive look compared to other metals. Valued for a multitude of reasons including being hypoallergenic, scratch resistant, tarnish resistant; also, because it won't corrode or shatter; making it perfect for everyday wear.

DAMASCUS STEEL

Damascus Steel is an ancient form of metal craftsmanship folding multiple layers of steel. This results in beautiful patterns in the metal that are unique to each ring. This process makes the material hard, tough, and flexible.
